Academic Ceremony and Regalia

PROCESSION

The academic procession is a vestige of medievalism in modern university life. The somber gowns and colorful hoods are similar to those worn by scholars and churchmen as early as the twelfth century. The garb had an element of utility. The robes were warm; the hoods could be drawn up to protect against drafts in unheated buildings.

Traditionally, the hood's silk lining was the color of the university and the color of the bordering velvet indicated the special area of study, which is still used today. White represents arts, letters and humanities; dark blue, philosophy; light blue, education; yellow, science; brown, fine arts; mustard, business; purple, law; dark green, medicine; lilac, dentistry; olive, pharmacy; pink, music; orange, engineering; citron, social work; sea foam, podiatry. The color of the tassels on the "mortar boards" or caps worn by the degree candidates corresponds to the velvet borders of the hoods.

Gowns representing the bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees vary in style. The bachelor's gown has long pointed sleeves; the master's gown, longer, narrow closed sleeves, which extend beyond the knees; the doctoral gown, with full bell-shaped sleeves and three bars of velvet, opens in the front with wide velvet bands in either black or the color indicating the area of study.

Stoles and sashes represent a student's affiliation with an organization or group such as student-athletes, study abroad, international, Greek organizations and other student service or academic organizations.

Cords are worn by students who excel academically and are reserved for Latin Honors, university honors and other honors programs and honor societies.

The tassel on the mortar board is customarily worn on the right side before the degrees are conferred and shifted to the left at the moment the degrees are awarded.

Keynote Speaker

DAVID BOARDMAN

INTERIM PROVOST, TEMPLE UNIVERSITY

David Boardman is interim provost of Temple University and dean of the Klein College of Media and Communication. A leader in the university community for more than a decade, he has demonstrated a deep commitment to Temple's mission.

As Temple's chief academic officer, Boardman works closely with President Fry, university leadership and faculty to shape the institution's academic strategy and vision. He oversees the university's 17 schools and colleges as well as divisions supporting the academic mission, including faculty affairs, student success, global engagement and strategic planning.

Boardman has served as dean of Klein College since 2013. During his tenure, the college has significantly elevated its national profile, expanded research activity and increased fundraising. Temple University Television (TUTV), a Klein enterprise, was named the nation's best college television station by the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System in both 2018 and 2022. In 2022, the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication named Boardman Administrator of the Year. He has also served as president of the Accrediting Council for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication.

Before joining Temple, Boardman spent more than two decades as executive editor and senior vice president of The Seattle Times. Under his leadership, the organization won four Pulitzer Prizes and produced 10 finalists. His individual honors include the National Ethics Award from the Society of Professional Journalists, the Goldsmith Prize in Investigative Reporting, the Worth Bingham Prize and the Investigative Reporters and Editors Award.

Boardman remains active in journalism and civic life. He is founding chair of the Lenfest Institute for Journalism and chairs Spotlight PA. He is immediate past chair of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press and serves on several boards, including the Solutions Journalism Network and the Organized Crime and Corruption Reporting Project.

He has conducted journalism seminars worldwide and previously worked as a reporter and editor in the Pacific Northwest. Boardman holds degrees from Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism and the University of Washington and has been inducted into both institutions' halls of fame. Boardman will return to his role as dean of the Klein College of Media and Communication on July 1. In recognition of his leadership and impact, he received an honorary degree at Temple University's 2026 commencement.
